The Red Sox will head to London for a four-game series with the Yankees this week. The Yankees are 23 games under.500 and just barely below Boston's pace, but they were outscored by the Orioles in the series finale on Sunday and lost that game in relief. The Sox were swept 2-0 on Saturday by the Nationals. The Sox have lost eight straight at Fenway, including the first two games of this series to the Yankees and the final two games of the regular season to the Orioles. The Sox are 6-2 at Fenway this year, but they have lost five of those games. The Red Sox are red hot and the Yankees are just as bad, but the way the Red Sox have been playing in Boston this year, it isn't really a contest. The Red Sox are well above.500 in the standings and they are currently the fifth best team in baseball in runs scored and fourth in runs scored and fourth in runs allowed. If it weren't for being a far better than average offensive team, their pitchers couldn't have kept them in the series.
